SAVE THE CHILDREN IN WAR STRICKEN EUROPE

Herbert Hoover says: "Our problem over the forthcoming winter appears to be the care of about 4,500,000 to 4,000,000 children. These children are the obligation of every man, woman and child in the Western Hemisphere, for we have suffered less, but beyond this they are a charge on the heart of the whole world."

Help in this humane duty by bringing or sending your subscription to the nearest local branch or to Headquarters Alberta Division, Canadian Red Cross Society, O'Sullivan Block, Calgary, on Armistice Day, or week following.

$10 will save a child; $1 will give it "saving food" for a month.

MEASLES

Public Health Act

Persons having measles or other children's complaints in their homes are hereby warned to keep the patients isolated from the rest of the household as much as possible, and take every possible precaution, and in all cases go strictly according to the medical advice; otherwise the Board of Health might be forced to put on an absolute quarantine.

Board of Health,
Clareholm, November 11, 1920.

This week has ushered in great winter weather. About two inches of snow fell on Wednesday. Thursday morning the temperature dropped to 6 degrees below zero, and Friday morning to 15 below, by thermometers on the street.

Editor Review-Advertiser.

Again I find it necessary to draw your attention to some more yarns going around. It appears to me that some people of this town could make better use of their time, than going around telling things that are not true at all. During the past two years that I have been employed as engineer here, I have never willfully, or through carelessness broken, burned out, or destroyed in any way the machinery, yet it has been said that I was the cause of all the trouble that occurred here a few weeks ago, when the gas engine cylinder head was cracked from overheating, and the bearings on the steam engine were burned out from running without oil; that I have been making trouble for Engineer Seary by putting the engine out of adjustment and tightening bearings, thus causing the town to be in darkness. Why was there any trouble, and why was the town without light while I was away hunting if I was the cause of all it? Last Saturday night if you remember the lights were late coming on, and as usual I was the cause. As luck would have it however, I was not near the power house that night nor for more than a week previous. Yet I am to blame for all the foregoing. I say to you and to all who read this, that all I have been accused of are barefaced, flat-footed fabrications without the slightest symptom of the truth. W. G. B.

INDIAN WITCHCRAFT

The strange experience of O-gemas-en when Woe-ben-ling, an Indian sorcerer, casts her evil spell.
By O-GE-MAS-EN (Little Clerk).

(Copyrighted)

In the early twenties, being the charge of a Hudson's Bay Post on Lake Manitoba, while poisoning by native Indian medicines was prevalent, evidence was brought before myself and the local missionary, making a serious charge against an old woman named Woe-ben-ling who, it was claimed, had given poison to one of the tribe whereby he was in danger of losing his life and at that time was lying in a semi-paralytic condition. We considered the evidence justified in laying the matter before the nearest magistrate, some 60 miles distant, and, if possible, procuring a warrant for her arrest. It was decided that I should go on with the papers. The time was dead of winter and the lake was frozen solid from shore to shore.

I finally decided to start alone the next evening and being the fortunate possessor of a splendid team of dogs looked forward to the trip. I made no payment. My dog team, consisting of four, deserves some description. Part Esquimaux, part wolf blood, tall clean limbed animals, with a single leg was some six miles per hour, but if pressed they could easily outrun a horse. Once having passed a house, the foregoers, and the last dog from a direct course whether a trail showed or not. Hand, Nose, Hero and Mono were the names of the dogs and they with a great love. "Andly" named and devoted to me, still they would attack anything I wished and were as courageous as lions. When viewing a wolf or fox on the ice I would let them out of their harness and if far enough from shore they would catch it and I would not be able to reach them. My caribou was, as usual, made from a birch log—can with handles, and a wolf's head and back, lined with fur, on its head a tripod with silver bells. On the collar of each dog were also tripod with bells, and the Indian head-dresses were a very handsome outfit.

Amongst the languages around the Post was a half-breed named James Sinclair who, speaking both English and Cree fluently, was often employed by me as interpreter, my knowledge of the native language being at that time limited. Calling at the office before my departure he appeared to be uneasy in his mind and on my questioning him as to the trouble, he replied by a question: "Is true, O-gemas-en, little clerk, that you are taking me to the north to find that Indian witch?" Where replied in the affirmative, he begged me not to go on, if I would, then to make a confession.

When they questioned the truth came out, he stating this woman was in league with bad spirits and that an evil influence would be sent to me, and that he was to go on. I was naturally much light of this and, in fact, before starting on my trip, I had told the natives, leaving each of them about 7.00 I whistled for my dogs which were trained to come to their places, knelt on my knees and said: "For some miles the trail ran through woods and then came the open lake, wind swept and some twenty miles of a treacherous to some called the Wharf. While I lay back in my caribou, comfortably wrapped in furs, the milks slipped by me and about half way across. By this time a few fleecy clouds had come up, but the moon, stars and the northern lights made the sky still very bright. A few minutes suddenly came over me that I was no longer alone. That I felt my comfortable position. I lay still for a few minutes, and then I felt a presence become stronger, and on stilling up in my caribou I saw to the left of the furnace a ball of phosphorescent light dancing along and keeping pace with the dogs, more than thirty feet from me. The light changed in size. At times as large as a football and at others as

Winter Storage Of Vegetables

Some Valuable Suggestions as to Proper Methods to Follow.

About 75 per cent. of the ordinary garden vegetables can be stored for winter use if a little care is taken. Most vegetables are best stored at a temperature just above the freezing temperature of water. They are best kept where it is dry as well as cool. Although it should be either too dry or too damp. Ramp cases should be kept in a dry atmosphere. In the case of these there is more danger of damage from having air too dry than from it being too moist.

Where there is a furnace in the basement or cellar it is well to partition off a room for the vegetables to prevent their being too hot. They should be kept from bottom to top of partition so as to admit heat during extremely cold weather.

Vegetables should not be stored in cement or stone walls, but there should be an air space between the vegetable and the wall to prevent frost. When this is so, frost should be added for a small stove for additional warmth during the coldest of the winter.

Don't let the frost injure the crops before you take them into the cellar. Don't bring them in while they are wet.

Don't cover roots with sand and if the cellar is hot. They will start to grow if you do.

Do not try to store onions, squash or pumpkin in a cool cellar. They will keep better in a cellar, some where the temperature is about 45°.

Don't forget to watch your storage room and sort out any decayed spots before the trouble spreads. Don't let the storage room become a good friend in a storage room.

If it is possible to provide a special storage place, select the best of the fruit and where the greatest amount of air circulation takes place. For the best storage of a little frost, roots should not be severely frozen before harvesting. If for some reason the roots are not cut off with the leaves. If they are to be stored at once they will be better stored in a cellar, some where the temperature is about 45°.

Onions should be kept just above the freezing point in temperature. They demand a good circulation of fresh air. Are best piled not too deep. Small bunches may be suspended from the ceiling by hanging roots. In small numbers, they may be stored in a cellar, some where the temperature is about 45°.

Made Fortune From Sheep

Texas Will Give Lectures in Canada.

"Sheep quotes" of the Texas range have been asked to lecture to widows of fallen Canadian soldiers, and explain their "great adventure" to other women and children and to the Dominion practice.

Two of the Texas women, Mrs. Mary Hartwell, and her sister, Miss Donna Gardner, may accept the invitation. The sisters are daughters of a retired Chicago manufacturer, and own and manage ten sections of land in Farmer county, Texas, upon which 5000 sheep now graze and from which 3000 sheep were sold during the past summer.

The signal success of these two "sheep quotes" was heralded during the meeting of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association in San Angelo recently, and was responsible for the invitation to Canada on a lecture trip. The invitation came from the head of the Federated Women's Club of the Dominion, who were present at the meeting of Mrs. Hartwell and Miss Gardner.

The two young women who have been deluged with letters from all over the Dominion, are also interested in the ranching business. Margie, now already in the sheep business, is the youngest and is about in their quints of lecture.

A desire to accomplish something worth while attracted the young women to the Dominion. They were told that there was a majority ready to understand in favor of it in the British Isles. If the idea is to continue without the aid of the Dominion, it will have to stand firmly together, for there are powerful forces opposed to it.

"It is far for us to maintain the heritage of freedom against assault from within and without, the priceless heritage of a great idea, conceived by the people of this Dominion."

They sold their farm and bought the ranch in Farmer county, a part of what was the old X I cattle country. For the last few years they have raised just enough money to purchase 100 sheep and from this little start their present business. Last spring and summer they sold the two women brought 3000 sheep to Texas from northwestern ranges where the sheep were threatened with starvation due to drought, and sold them to sheep breeders throughout West and Southwest Texas.

The women then moved to the Dominion to be expert sheep-handlers and very successful in directing their Mexican herdsmen. They maintain ranch headquarters at Pecos, Texas.

Many Are Willing
English Women Anxious to Wed this Alberta Farmer.

Asked by an Alberta farmer to find him a wife, the Dominion Canadian has received a post-bag containing 66 "applications for the post." The women are mostly from women in the Dominion, Yorkshire and the United States, but London is not unrepresented.

General contentment stimulates the farmer to get up and beat milk for half during the night, writes one woman. The farmer is in luck already, he will have to be kind and loving husband. I shall expect to be waited upon hand and foot. I have no any way. My word must be law. I shall expect you to comb my hair every night. I shall expect you to go to the bath, and I shall expect you to go to the bath.

The Dominion Canadian writes the confession: "I am very domesticated and fond of cigarettes."

Birds Affected By Fog.
Curiously, although human beings are utterly bewildered by a fog, most animals find their way through it with very little difficulty. A horse will find his way through a fog as easily as he can find his way through a clear day, and though the air is perfectly clear, and not only that, but will take the right road to the right animal. It is at all agitated to the road. Birds, on the other hand, are utterly bewildered by fogs. Pigeons, for instance, will come out on a foggy day, long hair, asleep, build up in their pigeon houses. Chickens and poultry of all kinds won't stir all the time a heavy fog is alone.

The company is to mine and develop every phase of the mining industry, including prospecting, developing, purchasing, and selling of all kinds of minerals, construction of a smelter and operation of a railway, telegraph and telephone system.

Hope of Mankind in Democratic Government Of Anglo-Saxon Races

St. Auckland, New Zealand, British Ambassador to the United States, in speaking to the American Bar Association said: "We are co-tenants of a great historic struggle, and at an unbelievable cost in blood and tears, which we must safeguard for ourselves and our children."

"The struggle of the upward movement in democracy is in religion, not in law, and that must ever be, for children of this world are ever in their generation than the children of light."

"We are all agreed that the form of government which conquered in England, and in the United States, has been best epitomized as Government of the people, by the people, for the people, and that it is the best form of government that the human race has been able to devise in the long millennium of its existence."

"But, said the Ambassador, I wonder how many realize what a tremendous revolution this relatively new idea is producing in all our minds. It is a new idea, and new the idea itself, and how little it has been tested. Nor is that all, only a trifling minority of the population of the world who believe in it. I doubt if even in Europe there is a majority which understands it."

"The idea is to be converted to a new idea itself, and how little it has been tested. Nor is that all, only a trifling minority of the population of the world who believe in it. I doubt if even in Europe there is a majority which understands it."

Alberta Wool Still Moving.

The Alberta Sheep Raisers' Association, which has its headquarters at Calgary, Alberta, has just sent for word another car of wool to Western Ontario. This makes a total of four cars this year or 338,388 pounds of wool.

It is interesting to note that this wool has been sent to the 275 consignments. Further consignments are expected from members of the association of about 20,000 pounds, which will bring the total weight to 367,488 pounds.

Trenchland Guides.

A number of guides have been asked the unemployment problem by returning to the old trenchland in France and Flanders. They are offering their services to the numerous parties of visitors who are exploring the battlefield.

The Crowded City.

High rents are said to be forcing people to get rid of their homes. What is the advantage of living in a large city when you can have a room as small as a house in a smaller place?—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Early.

Mrs. Brown is a very large lady. Her husband is a very small man. They are both very old. They are both very rich. They are both very happy.

Allypines are to be used for feeding whales and seals around Iceland and Greenland.
